PUPDATE

DATE: DECEMBER 2025 SERVICE DOG IN TRAINING: MURPHY

Hi there! I wanted to share a little holiday-season pupdate on how my training is going. 🎄🐾 Lately, I've been practicing something called handler transferability, which means I get to work with different humans—and I'm getting pretty good at it! This week, I trained with a new trainer and even explored historic St. Augustine together. There were so many festive sights and amazing smells, but I stayed focused like a true service dog in training. The trainer said I did an awesome job, and that made my tail wag extra hard!

I've also been spending more time working on one of my favorite skills—"my lap." This task provides deep pressure therapy to help my future Warrior feel calm and grounded... and it just so happens to be a great opportunity for extra love, kisses, and snuggles. 💛 I'm learning how to hold my position and stay steady while offering comfort, and my trainers say I'm doing a great job.

As the year winds down, I'm proud of how much I've learned and how far I've come. Training isn't always easy, but I'm growing every day and getting closer to helping a Veteran with PTSD. Thank you so much for sponsoring me and cheering me on—your support means everything to me.

I promise to keep putting my best paw forward!
Murphy 🐾
